

Case Study
Client:	IOR Group
Project:	Supply and installation of air conditioning to IOR Group offices in Richmond

IOR Group are a company who specialise in creating aspirational workplaces. With a headquarters in Richmond, overlooking the river, they certainly created that for their own staff.

When it came to renovating their offices they used an air conditioning supplier they knew they could trust. IOR Group and Rapid Air Conditioning have a long standing, mutually beneficial relationship built on previous successful installations such as Gazprom and Worley Parsons.

Rapid are considered one of IOR's preferred suppliers for climate control and can be trusted to provide the right solution for the given brief.

There was an existing system in the general office area so Rapid focused on their server room at 6x4 feet it is taken up mostly by a large server cabinet which is responsible for all their customer data.

A vital area to the business, it was important that the equipment was properly cooled to prevent any breakdowns. Rapid designed a wall-mounted split system design that fits neatly in the corner of the space, providing effective cooling to their servers.

IOR have five floors housing their workforce and have areas including a gym, rooftop communal area, general office space and server room. Rapid have now got the maintenance contract for all equipment on site.

What they say:

"Rapid are efficient, can be relied upon for a quick turnaround on quotes and specs. I would consider them on of our preferred suppliers, chosen based on price and service level in most cases."
